From the Minister | Reverend Shay MacKay

Reverend Shay MacKay
Interim Assistant Minister
shay@wbuuc.org

I can't think of a better time of year to contemplate discipline than the month of January in the North. A month for homebodies and introverts and mystics. A month for the weary and disillusioned. In its cold, dark embrace we can withdraw and reflect – whether in hopeless dismay or patient faith. January is a time of rest in the wake of the holidays - the race from Thanksgiving through Hanukkah, Solstice, Christmas, and into the New Year. It is a time of waiting for the renewal promised in the coming of Spring. Allowing ourselves the luxury of rest in this busy world takes discipline. Being patient in the waiting certainly takes discipline. Even sustaining faith in the light's return takes discipline. So, hunker down and hibernate, let yourself be still, and just breathe – you may just hear the whispers of your heart.

Let me lie in the cave
of my soul,
for too much light
blinds me,
steals the source
of revelation.

Let me seek solace
in the empty places
of winter's passage,
those vast dark nights
that never fail to shelter me.

~ Joyce Rupp, from Winter's Cloak

Marion Zimmer Bradley once wrote, "To know you are ignorant is the beginning of wisdom. Then, when you begin to learn, you will not have to forget all the things you think you know."

There have been many times throughout my life when I have willingly admitted my ignorance, gracefully surrendering to the gentle (and not-so-gentle!) lessons life offers me at every turn. And, I admit, there have been times when I have very ungracefully tripped over my own two feet in my rush to share all the things I think I know.

The annual MLK, Jr. breakfast is coming up and I'm excited to be a part of this year with all of you. I'm reminded of something a colleague of mine recently said in a sermon - that sometimes courage looks a lot like silence. As we as individuals and as a society move forward in confronting white supremacy and racism, I'm beginning to think that sometimes courage looks like stepping back and realizing that all I think I know is not all there is to know. That's a mouthful and takes some careful thought! Courage, sometimes, looks a lot like being quiet and admitting ignorance. And that takes discipline. For me, a middle-class, well-educated, white person, that can take a lot of discipline. Not only do I need to step back and listen to others, it also means slowing down and listening to my heart rather than my ego. Because, really, even with all the discipline in the world, none of this work we do will mean anything if it doesn't come from a place of love. Now that's something to contemplate during this cold January.

"Love has within it a redemptive power. And there is a power there that eventually transforms individuals. Just keep being friendly to that person. Just keep loving them, and they can't stand it too long... There's something about love that builds up and is creative. There is something about hate that tears down and is destructive. So love your enemies."

~ MLK, Jr.

From the President | Mark King

Mark King
2017-18 President
president@wbuuc.org

The worship service on Dec. 3rd elicited strong positive feedback from a member who said, “It clarified for us who and what we are as a community.” Here’s an excerpt from that service, including a reading that comes from the search packet for our new assistant minister where we describe our “dominant theology” for the candidates:

To arrive at this house, we’ve travelled many roads, many winding streets, and when we got here, gasping on the threshold, someone said, “Come in.” They did not ask for our credentials. They did not interrogate us: Humanist? Theist? Christian?

Agnostic? Are you a good and proper Unitarian? They simply said, “Come in.”

In our search for the new Assistant Minister, we must take good care. In this one instance we won’t just say, “Come in;” we will do some gentle, loving interrogation. But more important than the specific beliefs our candidates may hold, is how they hold what they know and love and wonder, how they hold their own experience of loss and love, hope and fear, war and peace and politics, death and immortality—and how they will hold yours. How we hold each other is what matters here, across all differences of belief and practice.

At White Bear Unitarian Universalist Church, we do not subscribe to a single theology but to many. We are committed to an open, principled search for truth; we celebrate goodness and love from innumerable sources; and we recognize that each of our members is on a unique and meaningful spiritual journey.

Many years ago, individual members of our church self-identified theologically with a variety of “isms” and “negativisms” (theist, humanist, not Catholic, not religious, etc.); there was a prevailing need to name what we were and/or what we were not. In this moment now, however, the congregation as a whole and individuals within it seem less interested in strict boundaries and defining or “dominant” borders. There is more theological openness, more spiritual curiosity, and a richer fluency with which to discuss and express the holy.

Our liberal religious life intends to be relevant, reverent, and courageous. We engage beauty, truth and virtue in ways that have power, meaning and integrity. We take seriously our individual search for truth, but we do so in community where we matter to one another. There is a deep longing for ritual here, for integrity and beauty in our worship experience, and a longing to remain connected with the natural world.

Grow Your Soul and Serve the World | Classes, Groups, & Forums

New Member Class Membership II | Sunday, Jan. 14 12:30-2:30pm—Alcove

Interested in joining WBUUC? Join us for the first in a two-part series on membership. Session I explores our church’s history and mission as well as that of Unitarian Universalism. Session II focuses on the meaning of membership and getting engaged in the church, followed by a book-signing ritual. After participating in Session I, Session II can be taken at any time. Light lunch provided. Childcare available. To register, contact Shay

MacKay at shay@wbuuc.org or call 651.426.2369 x. 103.

Care for the Caregivers Second Tuesdays | 10:30am-12pm

As the actor Edward Albert said, “The simple act of caring is heroic.” Nobody understands this better than those who provide care and support for a loved one struggling with dementia, mental illness, physical disabilities, or medical crises. With this support group for caregivers, we hope to foster a setting for sharing information, insight, advice, and encouragement.

The group will provide an opportunity to learn from others who face the same challenges, and allow you to talk about your experiences, possibly giving you new approaches to care giving. We will also offer information on resources and caregiver stress management tools. But most importantly, we hope to provide a space in which your weary spirit can find rest and support. The group will be facilitated by Shay MacKay, Interim Assistant Minister. For more information, contact Shay MacKay at shay@wbuuc.org.

Jill Schwendeman
Director of Youth Programs
youth@wbuuc.org

I love remembering a wintry evening with the youth group a few years ago. After working hard on a project, they gathered in a spirit of worship. One asked the group to follow him outside, where he climbed onto the picnic table. The light over the door illuminated thick snowflakes falling on and around us. We stood like deer, listening a long while after he said, “If you are completely silent, you can hear the snow falling.”

Afterward, we moved indoors for an evening of conversation, snacks, and playfulness. The crystalline moment was endless, though. This little pause to look up and listen was etched in us like stars in the sky.

Preparing for worship one day, I wheeled a cart into the 6th–8th grade classroom. When I stepped in for the start of class, I found the youth had started taking things off of it. They laid a starry blue cloth over the table, and set things gently on it: the chalice, candles, seashells, worry stones, hazelnuts, flowers, and wooden stars. As we went around the circle for the day’s check-in, each person lit a votive as they described a moment they had been filled with awe. I recalled that snowy night.

Youth are known for zany times, and they get a lot from them.

Exuberance is developmentally useful, and really fun! At times, asking them to move into quietness is not simple. My tools include things like soft lighting, quiet music, embodied prayer, attentiveness. “Stretch your arms up high,” I’ll say, “Feel the space you take up. Notice your heart beating and your weight against the floor. Look around—what a beautiful thing it is that we are here together! I’d like to ask you to take a seat. Breathe deeply. Let’s bring ourselves with kindness into this circle.”

Teens are neither children nor adults. Like anyone who stands at a threshold, they bring unique gifts and insights. With whole-heartedness and soul, they point us to reverence. As an adult I do well to be reminded by their example how to access my heart through the “play and learn” methods of childhood.

I hope our teens will be skilled way-finders, navigating their unique paths through the world. We use embodied practices to help them embrace both maturing skills and the wisdom of childhood. These include covenants, games with a purpose, cooking, story-telling, yoga, doodling discussions, visiting UU youth groups and worship sites of other faiths, representing our souls through art, walking the labyrinth, making music, dancing, writing.

They are invited to move outward, as they write to public leaders, prepare an apartment for a family in need, rake leaves for elders, march for racial justice, give a parent a break, learn peace-making with Nobel laureates, teach children about pollinators, plant seeds, make KIVA loans, paint murals, support Doctors Without Borders and others, spend caring time with children, or supply lunches for students.

They’re never just doing. We reflect and grow: “What was this like for you?” we ask. “Were there any surprises? What did you learn? How do you feel? How did this matter? Why should we do it?” Doing, reflecting, feeling, choosing—these are skills for a life of growth. At the center is the full-stop which is worship. We stand together receiving something, listening to snow fall from the dark sky. Pausing between work and play, we understand there are many ways of knowing.

Youth group members Tehya and Annelise write a poem.

Social Justice | Opportunities to Volunteer at Solid Ground

Mary Bolton

WBUUC Member & Solid Ground Volunteer
mpbolton54@yahoo.com

Solid Ground is an award-winning local nonprofit whose proven holistic approach helps families build the strong foundations they need for a brighter future. Through safe and affordable housing, as well as innovative supportive programming, Solid Ground helps families break the cycle of homelessness and poverty for the next generation. Solid Ground currently runs five programs in suburban Ramsey and Washington Counties, housing nearly 400 women, men, and children annually.

The organization was founded as East Metro Women's Council in 1989 by a group of women in Ramsey and Washington counties. The nonprofit's name was changed to Solid Ground in 2013 to reflect the program focus of helping families build a firm foundation for success. The organization has grown from serving 20 families a year in the early 1990s to now serving 70 families in different locations in both counties.

Solid Ground has received many local and national awards for innovation and excellence in service. WBUUC has supported the organization since its inception. Volunteers from WBUUC have been after-school tutors, provided birthday boxes for children, helped put on social events and meals, and served on the board. WBUUC member Mary Berger is currently serving on the Board of Directors. I am a volunteer driver, taking women to appointments such as the food shelf or clothing closet. These are just 2 of many rewarding volunteer jobs available.

I also recommend attending their "Home at Last Tour" every 2nd Tuesday from 5:30-6:30pm, which includes a tour of East Metro Place, their housing site in White Bear Lake.

For more information or to get involved, go to solidgroundmn.org and follow the prompts: how to help>how you can help> volunteer (to apply online), or you can contact Hannah Parish, Volunteer Program Manager at 651.846.9024 or volunteer@solidgroundmn.org. ## Social Justice | What Does It Mean to Be White?

More than a dozen members of our congregation heard Professor Robin DiAngelo speak to this question at a program sponsored by Unity Church, WBUUC, and others in November. In her provocative and healing book What Does It Mean to Be White? DiAngelo asks white readers to listen, learn, act, and answer, posing questions about race in America and racism, white supremacy and white fragility, and the crucial need for white racial literacy.

You can join the conversation at the Wednesday Night Forum on Jan. 31, and on two Thursday evenings in February (Feb. 8 and 15). Contact Victoria, or sign up in the Social Hall, to receive readings in advance. A diversity trainer for more than 20 years, and currently Lecturer at Washington State University, Professor DiAngelo was a keynote presenter at the UUA's General Assembly in New Orleans this past June.

Her work has appeared in Salon, NPR, Slate, Alternet, the Atlantic, The New York Times, and The Seattle Times. She is the author of two recent, ground-breaking books.

Join the Conversation About Race in America

Wednesday, Jan. 31
Thursdays, Feb. 8 & 15

Due to calendar challenges in this busy year, we are postponing the offering of the Beloved Conversations anti-racism program, originally planned for this winter. Last year, 13 members engaged this intensive curriculum, exploring the impact of racism and the promise of healing within themselves, within our congregation, and in the wider world. We're committed to offering this 10-week training next year, with Jane Bacon and Tracy Bray facilitating. With last year's "graduates" and new participants next year, we are building a core group of anti-racism leaders. For more details, contact Jane Bacon: janebacon@msn.com.

A Congregation of Generous People | Coming of Age in the Spirit of UU

Raising children in this world to become compassionate and contributing adults is a community effort. As WBUUC kids transition from childhood into adulthood—from 7th through 12th grade—they are guided on their journey as part of our youth group.

See the World Beyond Absolutes

Youth group members learn to embrace each other's diversity and create a safe home for each other. Programs like Making Allies, Making Friends, Our Whole Lives sex education, and Coming of Age help our youth cherish and make the most of their precious lives. They expand their religious literacy and kinship together, in part, through field trips to neighboring faiths.

Connect to the Bigger World of Unitarian Universalism

Our young adults discover they are part of a vibrant and socially active community through regional UU conferences like Youth Con. Each year the youth participate in Boston Bound, a UU identity pilgrimage to Boston, MA. In addition, each year our youth step into the role of church leadership to plan and run a Sunday service.

Being a Force for Positive Change

Locally, our youth group makes gifts for shelters, volunteers for Project Home to help homeless families, and supports hunger programs. Globally, they attend PeaceJam Youth to advocate for service work for peace, and support social action to promote the UN's anti-poverty goals.

Your generosity makes these service and social activities possible. Without it, the experiences that help guide these young adults to live moral, compassionate, service-oriented lives couldn't exist. When you give to WBUUC, you are supporting not only your community, but also providing a foundation for the future.

Our congregation is supported financially by the deliberate generosity of members and friends. To learn more and to contribute, visit www.wbuuc.org/pledge.

Upcoming Events | MLK Breakfast: Dynamic Speakers, Great Food

Stephanie Shaw
MLK Breakfast Committee
MLK@wbuuc.org

For the 9th consecutive year, WBUUC is hosting the annual MLK Community Breakfast for the Northeast Suburbs on Monday, Jan. 15, 2018 at 7am. This is one of more than a dozen community breakfasts held around the state to celebrate the life and legacy of Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

“Building Bridges for a Bold Dream” is the theme of this year’s breakfast. WBUUC sponsors the breakfast in partnership with Interfaith Action of Greater St. Paul and Twin Cities Public Television.

Rashad Anthony Turner is our guest speaker this year. Since November 2016, he has been director of community engagement at Minnesota Comeback, a non-profit education coalition committed to addressing the achievement gap. Prior to that, he was the founder and lead organizer of Black Lives Matter St. Paul. He holds a bachelor's degree in criminal justice from Hamline University and a master's degree in education from St. Mary's University of Minnesota. He was born and raised in St. Paul and he worked for over nine years in education, including seven years at schools in White Bear Lake, then at Century College.

Attendees will also watch a big screen broadcast of keynote speaker David Oyelowo, who portrayed Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. in the 2014 film “Selma.” He will be speaking from the downtown Minneapolis Armory at the 28th annual MLK Holiday Breakfast, sponsored by UNCF and the General Mills Foundation.

Everyone is welcome. The breakfast is served at 7am in the WBUUC Social Hall. The program, which is free, starts at 7:30am in the sanctuary.

Tickets for the breakfast are on sale at the church most Sundays between services. They also can be purchased online. Visit wbuuc.org/MLK for more information and to buy tickets. Breakfast tickets are $5 per person. Children 12 and under are free, but need a ticket. Questions? Email mlk@wbuuc.org.

Update | The 2018 Search Continues!

Concurrent with our search for a new Assistant Minister, we are shaping a new position to fill critical vacancies in our staff team. This coming June, with sadness and deep gratitude, we will bid farewell to Director of Youth Programs Jill Schwendeman, who through her 15-year tenure has shaped a vibrant community of teen youth and their families.

We're hoping to deepen this work by combining the part-time Youth position with our vacant Membership position, bringing our teens more fully into the whole church community, and deepening connections across age groups and interests. The working title for this new, full-time position is Director of Congregational Community, and it may be filled by a dedicated lay person or, possibly, by a minister. Amy Peterson Derrick's role as Director of Religious Education will shift to hold curriculum for middle school and high school teens, with the new position focusing on Coming of Age, youth worship, and our UU heritage pilgrimage to Boston. The "DCC" will also lead our Membership programs, and help connect new and longtime members to opportunities for meaningful service. In the coming weeks we'll post this job locally, through UU congregations in the Twin Cities and at United Theological Seminary, and also nationally, through the UUA. Victoria and Amy hope to present a candidate to the Board in the spring, with an August start date in mind.

Meanwhile, the Search for our new Assistant Minister is in high gear. Our position has been posted through the UUA's transition office, greeting prospective candidates with a detailed, 25-page description of our church. In January, we'll begin to receive applications (through the UUA office) and exchange online "packets" with those who inquire. We'll narrow the search throughout January and February through phone/Zoom interviews, and hold in-person interviews into mid-March.

"...We are shaping a new position to fill critical vacancies in our staff team."

By April, guided by the Search Committee and in consultation with the Board, Victoria will extend an offer to the candidate we believe will be the best match for WBUUC in this exciting moment. To learn more, ask questions, or share ideas and concerns, speak with any member of our Search Committee: Alex Bartlett, Alan Hagstrom, Pat Hogen, Laurie Kigner, Kathy Sedro, Nancy Ver Steegh, Renee Smith, or Katy Lowery, Chair, katy.lowery@gmail.com.

Music & Art | Joyful Noise Presents Ann Reed

Margo Berg
Joyful Noise Committee Co-Chair
mberg@mjb.com

Award-winning songwriter, singer, guitarist, and author, Ann Reed has been performing for more than 40 years. With her rich alto voice and twelve-string guitar, she tells stories about the human experience, and sings songs that find a permanent place in the heart. Some of her songs and stories, of course, might end up closer to your funny bone...but a little irreverence never hurt anyone.

A Minnesota native, Ann began teaching herself how to play the guitar at the ripe old age of 12 and has been a performer for her entire adult life. Growing up with two older brothers, she was influenced by whatever they were listening to—Kingston Trio, early Joni Mitchell, the Beatles, Pete Seeger—as well as musicians of her parents' era: Cole Porter, George and Ira Gershwin, Ella Fitzgerald. In addition to music, Ann writes plays and novels, and is known to be deeply involved with non-profits that benefit women and children.

She has been known to donate up to 25% of her concert tour bookings to these organizations.

This upcoming Joyful Noise concert will be a blend of new songs from Ann's CD, Winter Springs, Summer Falls, released in November, as well as old favorites from her catalog of nearly 300 songs. Tickets are available online at wbuuc.eventbrite.com and at the ticket table after Sunday services. Cost-saving ticket packages for all three Joyful Noise concerts this winter and spring (Ann Reed, Jan. 20; the OK Factor, March 3; and Patty Peterson presents the Jazz Women All Stars, April 14) are also available.
